

One year ago today.

On Friday, June 14, 2019, we formally launched Royal Harbor Partners Wealth Management. That decision to leave a prestigious financial firm was not easy, and 365 days later, we are now more confident that the decision was the right one. The decision was a quality of life issue. Our heartfelt desire to create better lives for our clients. Better lives for our families.

Sharing the news about this day is difficult. This year has been filled with global pandemics, massive employment losses, failing global economies and now devastating social unrest. Many people in our country are experiencing very real despair, tough economic times and now living a life that they never asked for or even imagined. Celebrating anything right now is difficult.

However, not to mention this date would be a missed opportunity to acknowledge and reflect on the great strides made to create something we can be proud of. It has been a hard 365 days, but it has also been very satisfying to look back on what we have accomplished. Something done right in a season when many things seem wrong.

We are thankful and grateful to our spouses, our families, friends and especially our clients for their support and confidence in the past year. We knew building the kind of company we wanted to be proud of would be hard and require very big sacrifices physically, financially and emotionally. You have our heartfelt gratitude.

We hope for the physical and emotional health of our global neighbors and especially for our country. May there better days ahead for everyone.

All the best,
